Business Innovation Initiative (BII) War Game for Naval Open Systems Architecture (OSA)

The BII Round 2 War Game is about to start!

Aligning the naval acquisitions community to the new Open Systems Architecture strategy present a complex set of problems with many stakeholders. We need to better understand the challenges and identify incentives in order to successfully meet the future demands of our naval force. Together, we're proposing and publishing new ideas and action plans to work together more effectively.

Massive Multiplayer Online War Game Leveraging the Internet (MMOWGLI) is a message-based game to encourage innovative thinking by many people, connected via the Web. The BII MMOWGLI game is for Navy, Defense, and Industry professionals exploring how best to achieve the new Open Systems Architecture (OSA) strategy. The Navy will rely on OSA to improve war-fighting capability, gain better cost efficiency, and deliver responsibly.

Participation

DASN RDT&E is looking for participants from all DoD agencies, Academia, and Industry. All defense acquisition professionals are encouraged to play. We are engaging Academic participation through advanced business programs with an emphasis on government and public policy. Lastly, we are engaging Industry to help understand how the market will react to a new business environment. By incorporating many points of view and numerous years of experience, DASN RDT&E intends on understanding the breadth and depth of opportunities to improve the acquisition effectiveness.

Game Play

The BII MMOWGLI game will be played between July 15th and July 26th and will cover many topics. Participants are encouraged to contribute as much as they can during this two week period. The game will feature specific challenge areas daily so participants should check in daily.
