IUID Individual Contribution Award

Press Release September, 2009

Ms. Pat Jacklets
Northrop Grumman

Ms. Pat Jacklets has had a wide-ranging career in the property management field. She has thirty-five (35) years experience in property, material, and program management and is currently the Manager of Property Management for Northrop Grumman's Aerospace Systems Battle Management & Engagement Systems Division. Pat has represented her company well as their corporate representative to the Aerospace Industries Association Property Management Committee, serving as Vice Chair and as the immediate past Chair. Pat received the NPMA's highest national recognition, the "Property Person of the Year Award" in 2006.

Pat has been a major participant in the Government's IUID initiative since inception representing Northrop Grumman Corporation and the Aerospace Industry Association's Property Management Committee. She has shared her knowledge of Property Management and has provided a significant industry perspective and assistance to the UID team. Pat is considered an Industry leading expert in IUID, and has taught many classes on UID for the NPMA, participated as a speaker at the UID Forums, and authored several articles on UID. She received the NPMA National Education Seminar Conference Proceeding Award for her white paper on "Unique Item Identification."

She continues to provide considerable guidance to Industry on the transition from DD1662 reporting to IUID Registry reporting, and her company was one of the initial submitters to the IUID Registry, paving the way for others to follow. She continues to participate as a key contributor to the NDIA Industry Leaders Advisory Group (ILAG) and the Government Furnished Property (GFP) Industry Group.
