REPORT TO CONGRESS ON
GLOBAL MILITARY HOUSING AND EXPEDITIONARY FACILITIES
MOLD CONTAMINATION

Introduction

This report responds to the Explanatory Statement accompanying the Continuing Appropriations and Military Construction, Veterans Affairs, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2017, and Zika Response and Preparedness Act (Public Law 114-223), and Senate Report 114-237, page 9, accompanying S. 2806, the Military Construction, Veterans Affairs, and Related Agencies Appropriation Bill, 2017. The Explanatory Statement requests that the Secretary of Defense provide the congressional defense committees with a report detailing global military housing and expeditionary facilities locations with mold contamination, mitigation strategies implemented or expected to be in place, and any new construction standards designed to prevent mold contamination.

Mold in facilities is a problem that the private sector, as well as the Department of Defense (DoD), deals with on a routine basis. It can manifest itself in numerous ways but it generally results from water incursion either from internal sources (e.g., leaking pipes) or external sources (e.g., rainwater). Dampness becomes a problem when various materials in a building (e.g., rugs, walls, ceiling tiles) become damp or wet for extended periods of time. Excessive moisture in the air (i.e., high relative humidity) that is not properly controlled with air conditioning can also lead to excessive dampness. Per the Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA), Mold Remediation in Schools and Commercial Buildings Guide, "It is impossible to eliminate all mold and mold spores in the indoor environment. However, mold growth can be controlled indoors by controlling moisture indoors."

Military Housing and Expeditionary Facilities Locations with Mold Contamination

Appendix A provides a list of DoD facilities and their locations where mold was reported during fiscal year 2016 that required a maintenance response for mitigation, which is beyond remediation through simple housekeeping. The list contains 1,112 facilities sorted by DoD Component and shows the installation name, state or country, Facility Analysis Category (FAC) title, number of reported instances, and date of last reported instance for each facility.

Mitigation Strategies Implemented or Expected To Be In Place

The Department's prevention, mitigation and remediation strategies for existing buildings include the following:

- Communicate with building occupants.
- Inspect building areas for evidence of dampness. Clean and repair or replace any building materials that are moisture-damaged or show evidence of visible mold growth.

- Prevent high indoor humidity through the proper operation of heating, ventilating, and air-conditioning (HVAC) systems.
- Conduct regularly scheduled HVAC system inspections, and promptly correct any problems.
- Ensure surface water drains away from the building.

DoD's Unified Facility Guide Specification (UFGS) UFGS-02 85, Mold Remediation, is a specification used by DoD Components that covers the requirements for the demolition, cleaning, removal, and disposal of mold contaminated materials. In developing guidance and managing mold remediation, the DoD leverages upon the information provided by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, and the American Industrial Hygiene Association.

In addition to the Department's UFGS on mold remediation the Military Services have issued supplements to address mold on a technical level tailored to each Services organization and management processes. Examples include:

- U.S. Army Center for Health Promotion and Preventative Medicine Technical Guide 277, Army Facilities Management Information Document on Mold Remediation Issues and Technical Guide 278, Industrial Hygiene/Preventative Medicine Mold Assessment Guide. These Army guides employ a multifaceted approach incorporating proactive personnel awareness, prevention techniques, remediation planning, and a tiered approach to the remediation and abatement of mold contamination.
- The Department of the Navy's Naval Facilities Engineering Command issued a Mold Response Manual that provides basic criteria and information governing the assessment and remediation of mold.
- The Air Force Technical Guide for Indoor Air Quality Surveys provides the education and background necessary for Bioenvironmental Engineering to make informed decisions during indoor air quality surveys.

New Construction Standards Designed To Prevent Mold Contamination

The Department's Unified Facilities Criteria (UFC) UFC 3-410-01, Heating, Ventilating, and Air Conditioning Systems, provide supplementary guidance and strategies for new construction to guard against mold. It incorporates the provisions of the International Code Council's International Mechanical Code and American Society of Heating, Refrigerating and Air-Conditioning Engineers design guidance to the greatest extent possible. Additionally our adherence to regional building codes that consider design for local climates yield designs that regulate indoor environments and prevent conditions that may contribute to mold growth. The Department's design guidance is regularly re-evaluated and new air quality technologies that could alleviate mold are given consideration as industry best practices improve. UFC 3-410-01 was updated as recently as November 2017.

At Appendix B is a complete list of DoD UFCs and UFGSs that relate to the prevention and/or remediation of mold.

Challenges and Summary:

DoD's real property portfolio consists of more than 275,000 buildings that total approximately 2.2 billion square feet located at 4,793 sites world-wide. The average age of DoD buildings exceeds 40 years old and many of their HVAC systems lag the modern technologies that efficiently and accurately regulate the indoor environments.

DoD facilities are required by policy to be inspected by the installation Department of Public Works (DPW) personnel every five years, at minimum, for condition issues (critical facilities, hospitals and dependent schools are inspected more frequently). This inspection cycle is a challenge for some installations due to limited DPW manpower, accessibility limitations due to mission or occupancy type, and/or a lack of funding to conduct inspections when they are executed through contract support. However, for this report, all government-owned family housing, unaccompanied housing, permanent party and training barracks, and manned expeditionary locations were inspected for the visual existence of mold. Housing privatized under the Military Housing Privatization Initiative was not included in the survey given those facilities are owned by private sector firms.

Communications with building and housing occupants is a key component of installation mold mitigation plans. Occupants are encouraged to report evidence of mold to their installation DPW and/or Bio-Environmental offices.

Finally, the Department has the necessary technical data to develop plans and we continue to update our guidance to incorporate mold mitigation science as new information is distributed by the experts.

UFC and UFGS Criteria Related to the Prevention and/or Remediation of Mold

The following is a list of Unified Facility Criteria (UFC) and Unified Facility Guide Specifications (UFGS) that provide guidance that supports mold prevention or plans for remediation of mold.

- UFC 1-200-01 DoD BUILDING CODE (GENERAL BUILDING REQUIREMENTS) [Publication Date 6/20/2016] implements the use of the International Building Code (IBC) consistent with the scope of current military requirements and procedures.
- UFC 3-101-01 ARCHITECTURE [Change 3 Publication Date 6/20/2016] provides requirements for new construction that includes requirements for protecting construction materials, building envelope design for moisture control, and air barrier testing. These design and construction provisions will ensure that the six sides of the building envelope do not trap moisture and mold growth will be prevented. The following are excerpts from this UFC.

3-5.4 Mold Mitigation and Prevention.

The presence of moisture in the materials of a project can promote the growth of fungi or mold and pose a hazard to the occupants, construction workers, and the design team. During construction, implement protective measures to ensure that the construction process adequately shelters the materials to prevent mold growth and material degradation. Remove wet products subject to mold development. See Chapter 3, Moisture Barrier, for more information on designing to prevent mold development. For mold mitigation on Navy projects, refer to Navy Interim Technical Guide FY03-04 NAVFAC Mold Response Manual.

3-5.1 Water-Resistive Barriers (WRB).

Wall assemblies must incorporate a WRB (meeting the requirements of Chapter 14 of the International Building Code (IBC) as a minimum) in the back-up wall behind the cladding, with flashings to lead water out. This is true for all claddings, including exterior insulation and finish systems (EIFS).

3-5.1.1 Flashing. All copings and sills must receive through-wall flashing under them. In order to direct moisture out of a cavity through weep holes, provide continuous flashing at the bottom of the cavity and wherever the cavity is interrupted by elements such as shelf angles, lintels and penetrations. Extend flashing through the outer masonry face and turn down at 450 to form a drip. Do not terminate through-wall flashing behind the exterior face. Install through-wall flashing over all openings, sills, spandrels, shelf angles and parapet copings. Where flashing is not continuous, such as over openings and at sills, extend flashing ends beyond the lintel on both sides and turn up into the head joint two inches at each end to form an end dam.

Penetrations such as windows and louvers in the exterior wall assemblies must have pan flashing installed in the rough opening sill. This pan sill flashing must have end dams at both jambs a minimum of 2 in. (50 mm) high and a rear dam of 2 in. (50 mm) high. Comply with ASTM E 2112, the requirements in Chapter 4, Masonry, and the SMACNA Architectural Sheet Metal Manual recommendations.\1\

Related to the Prevention and/or Remediation of Mold

3-5.1.2 Waterproofing, damp proofing, and waterstops /1/Counteract below-grade transfer of water through walls by damp-proofing or waterproofing on walls, depending on hydrostatic pressure and drainage capability. Minimize capillary suction of water upwards from wet footings can be minimized by troweling a layer of cementitious crystalline waterproofing into the wet concrete on top of footings or by including a waterproofing admixture in the footing concrete mix. Footing drains and under-slab drainage must be incorporated based on the recommendations of the geotechnical engineering report. Waterstops must be provided at all concrete cold joints near or below grade. If required to address hydrostatic pressure or as recommended by the geotechnical report, provide drainage planes combined with waterproofing material and a footing drain on below- grade walls.

3-5.2.1 Building Envelope Vapor Retarders. \1\Design the building envelope to control the movement of moisture and air with the effective use of water vapor retarders and air infiltration barriers. Design envelope sections to prevent condensation on interior surfaces or within wall/roof sections that would support mold growth. Follow vapor retarder requirements listed in the IBC Section 1405. For building enclosure systems or environmental conditions not covered by IBC Article 1405, design the enclosure using simplified or transient design tools referenced in the ASHRAE Handbook of Fundamentals, Chapter 25, Heat, Air and Moisture Control in Buildings, and the following sections. Do not provide multiple vapor retarders that trap moisture between the retarders. Select vapor retarders in accordance with ASTM C 755. Based on the results of the analysis described in this section, design the assemblies for appropriate diffusion control.

3-5.2.2 Floor Slab Vapor Retarders. Floor slabs on grade with non-permeable floor finishes must always have a vapor retarder of 0.05 perms or less meeting the requirements of ASTM E 1745 Class A. Non-permeable floor finishes include (but are not limited to) epoxy, polyurethane, vinyl, linoleum and rubber. Under slab vapor retarders must be durable enough to withstand construction activity and must be terminated around the perimeter and penetrations detailed according to the manufacturer's instructions. Additionally, specifications must require measurement of slab relative humidity in accordance with ASTM F 2170 to meet the requirements of the floor finish manufacturer or must include an application of a topical moisture mitigation material. Concrete mix for floor slabs on grade with non-permeable floor finishes must be normal-weight, moisture-cured, with a water/cement ratio of between 0.4 and 0.45; use a high-range water reducing admixture as necessary.

3-5.2.3 Roof Vapor Retarders. Provide moisture analysis of the roof assemblies per Chapter 3, Building Envelope Vapor Retarders. Roof assemblies on concrete slabs must always include a vapor retarder on top of the concrete and a vented metal deck to control construction moisture in the concrete from affecting roof assemblies. However, low slope roof assemblies using rigid insulation must be designed without a vapor retarder whenever possible. Install vapor retarder in accordance with guidance in the NRCA Roofing and Waterproofing Manual.

3-5.2.4 Ventilated Spaces. Ventilate spaces created outside the roof/ceiling vapor retarder. For sloped roofs, ventilation must comply with the IBC Section 1203 Ventilation. Ensure that moisture transfer from ventilated attics into the building is minimized.

3-5.3 Waterproofing. Use waterproofing membranes to protect the interior of the building when there is hydrostatic pressure due to a high water-table below grade or when there is paving, landscaping or a vegetated roof...

3-6.1.1 Design, construct and test the building enclosure with a continuous air barrier to control air leakage in accordance with the requirements of ANSI/ASHRAE/USGBC/IES 189.1 Normative Appendix B, "Prescriptive Continuous Air Barrier" as indicated herein. ASHRAE 90.1 for semi-heated spaces, provide the continuous air barrier in climate zones 3 to 8. Clearly identify all air barrier components of each envelope assembly on construction documents and detail the joints, interconnections and penetrations of the air barrier components. Clearly identify the boundary limits of the building air barriers and of the zone or zones to be tested for building air tightness on the drawings. Include the statement of the calculated six-sided area of the air barrier envelope on the drawings for each test area.

UFC 3-401-01 MECHANICAL ENGINEERING [Change 1 Publication Date 10/1/2015] provides requirements for the mechanical design.

2-1.7 Specifications

All projects including DBB and DB will use the applicable UFGS as part of the design and construction documentation. \1\ Construction specifications projects shall require all materials to be protected from moisture and conditions that have potential to result in deterioration of material properties or in mold growth during site storage and construction. Protective measures must be taken to ensure that the construction process adequately shelters the materials to prevent mold growth and material degradation during construction. /1/

2-2.2 Facility HVAC Systems and Controls.

Design and construct Heating, Ventilating, and Air Conditioning (HVAC) systems for facilities in accordance with this document and the current issues of UFC 3-410-01. \1\ Insulate piping with an operating temperature below dewpoint with jacketed insulation meeting the cold piping requirements. The insulation jacket must be sealed to provide an exterior vapor barrier. /1/

UFC and UFGS Criteria
Related to the Prevention and/or Remediation of Mold

UFC 3-410-01 HEATING, VENTILATING, AND AIR CONDITIONING SYSTEMS [Change 3 Publication Date 1/25/2017] provides requirements for the design of facility heating, ventilating, and Air Conditioning systems. It incorporates the provisions of the International Code Council's International Mechanical Code (IMC) and ASHRAE design guidance to the greatest extent possible. The requirements provide control of environmental conditions within facilities (design to prevent mold).

3-2 [FOR NAVY AND AIR FORCE PROJECTS ONLY] VENTILATION AIR

\2\ For Navy and Air Force projects, the required /2/ method for \1\ providing ventilation and /1/ moisture control is to separate the ventilation function from the space cooling function using a dedicated outdoor air system (DOAS). For new construction and major renovations projects when the total outdoor air requirements exceed 1000 CFM, provide a DOAS that supplies dehumidified and reheated (tempered to room DB temperature) 100 percent outside air directly to all spaces when occupied. The system must provide the capability to condition ventilation air \1\ not to exceed /1/ 55°F dewpoint over the full range of cooling load. Conditioning of ventilation air is not required for facilities not otherwise air-conditioned. Size the DOAS to handle both the ventilation and zone generated latent loads if \1\ life cycle /1/ cost effective.

\2\ Humidification of ventilation air is not required. Facility central ventilation air supply systems must not be subject to intermediate season (no-heat/no-cool) shutdown. (Individual room heating/cooling equipment must have occupant control, but may be subject to intermediate season heating/cooling curtailment as directed by installation or command policy.) /2/

\1\ For new construction and major renovations, provide energy recovery devices in accordance with ASHRAE 90.1. For all projects, provide energy recovery devices where life-cycle cost-effective. /1/

On DOAS units, system controls must monitor the discharge temperature, provide a visual alarm at the unit and send an alarm to the building controls if discharge air temperature exceeds the design dew point by 5°F or more during the cooling season.

\2\ Include a vapor transmission (hygrothermal) analysis in accordance with UFC 3-101-01. /2/

3-4 HEATING AND COOLING LOAD CALCULATIONS

Heating and cooling system design loads for the purpose of sizing systems, appliances and equipment must be determined in accordance with the following requirements.

UFC and UFGS Criteria
Related to the Prevention and/or Remediation of Mold

\2\ The HVAC design analysis for new facilities or renovation of existing facilities must include a psychrometric analysis documenting that the system meets design criteria. The analysis must provide calculations of system cooling load, energy/mass transfer through conditioning equipment and fans, and a system schematic indicating state point dry bulb and wet bulb temperatures (or humidity ratios) of outside air, mixed air, supply air, and return air flow streams. The system must provide the capability to condition ventilation air and maintain space relative humidity over the full range of cooling load. /2/

3-4.2.1 \1\ Spaces /1/ Conditioned for Comfort Cooling

Size equipment and all system components to maintain and control indoor design conditions at each of the following: (1) the 1.0 percent dry bulb and the corresponding mean coincident wet bulb (MCWB) temperature and (2) the 1.0 percent humidity ratio and corresponding mean coincident dry bulb (MCDB) temperature.

3-4.2.2 \1\ Spaces /1/ Conditioned for Specialized Technical Requirements

Size equipment and all system components to maintain and control indoor design conditions at each of the following: (1) the 0.4 percent dry bulb temperature and the corresponding MCWB temperature and (2) the 1.0 percent humidity ratio and corresponding MCDB.

3-4.3.1 \1\ Spaces /1/ Conditioned for Comfort Cooling

78°F (26°C) dry bulb and a maximum of 55°F (12.8°C) dew point. The design must take into account the moisture gain in the space.

5-1.2.5 Building Air Balance Calculations.

Provide air balance calculations addressing the relationship between supply, return, outside air, and exhaust air quantities and indicating pressurization. Special requirements for space pressurization must be reflected and referenced in the air balance calculations.

5-2.7 Equipment Schedules.

\2\ To preclude moisture carryover, coil face velocities must not exceed 167.6 meters per minute (550 feet per minute). /2/

Paragraphs in Appendix B Best Practices of UFC 3-410-01, HVAC Systems

B-2 INDEPENDENT VENTILATION SYSTEMS.

Ventilation systems that are independent of the primary air supply and distribution systems can provide benefits such as increased humidity control, reduced amount of ventilation air than may be otherwise required, and increased equipment operating efficiency.

B-7 \1\ DEDICATED OUTSIDE AIR SYSTEM (DOAS). /1/

Consider using a separate system for outdoor air where necessary to maintain a sensible heat ratio of the mixed air entering the primary air-conditioning unit within the required limits of commercially available equipment and/or to reduce corrosive, salt-laden air from entering the primary air distribution system.

UFC 3-810-01N NAVY AND MARINE CORPS ENVIRONMENTAL ENGINEERING FOR FACILITY CONSTRUCTION [Publication Date 3/1/2016] provides specific criteria on environmental engineering design topics as they relate to project development of demolition, renovation and site development projects. In these situations, it is primarily intended to address hazardous waste management. Including conducting field investigations, surveys and sampling for mold and mold spores.
